Song of the Week: "How Far? Ft. Tony Allen & Skepta" by Gorillaz
Stuart "2-D" Pot, Murdoc Niccals, Noodle, and Russel Hobs have been hard at work in their fictional studio this year. The animated members of the virtual band Gorillaz, created by singer-songwriter Damon Albarn and animator Jamie Hewlett, have released a new single this month "How Far? Ft. Tony Allen & Skepta" as part of their ongoing "Song Machine" project that is releasing new songs by Gorillaz each month this year. The track features legendary Nigerian drummer and Afrobeat pioneer Tony Allen (who recently passed away on April 30th, 2020) and British MC Skepta of Nigerian descent. Damon Albarn and Tony Allen were close friends and frequent collaborators, and in my opinion the two never sounded better. Rest in peace Tony Allen.

A Japanese woman who built a trendy following online with her video game skills has been recognized as the world's oldest YouTube gamer, at the age of 90.

Hamako Mori, known as "Gamer Grandma" to her 250,000 YouTube subscribers, started gaming 39 years ago. Her YouTube channel launched in 2015, and she posts up to four videos a month. In her clips, she does everything from unboxing new consoles to broadcasting her gaming prowess.

And now Mori, who counts the "Grand Theft Auto" series among her favorites, is officially the world's oldest gaming YouTuber, according to Guinness World Records. Mori says that, like many of us, she sometimes games until 2 a.m. or later.

Hamako is a prime example that it is never too late to learn something new and is also proof of the pure joy that video games can bring to anyone at any age! You can find her YouTube channel by searching "Gamer Grandma."

HOOOP, THERE IT IS!!

Governor Gavin Newsom says that pro sports could re-open in California by June 1 if the state continues the same trend of declining cases. He was also clear in stating that no fans will be allowed in attendance and that modifications will need to be made for athletes to follow CDC guidelines. Lakers forward Jared Dudley has stated on twitter that he believes the NBA will announce its comeback in June with games to be played sometime in July. If he is correct, we are about eight weeks away from seeing 5 on 5 basketball and crowning an eventual champion! Hopefully, it resumes as soon as safely possible.
